Off the Plantation
to Freedom

Edward Cage has been an eloquent and powerful advocate for conservatism, recognizing that the false story line told by the left and propagandized by the media only serves to keep America's minorities "on the plantation." Cage will share his tactics for opening the eyes of those who are still enchained by the leftist lies, and for bringing them to see the light of truth.

Edward Cage was born in St. Louis, Missouri. Raised on the city's North side, he was faced with countless challenges, each of which he overcame. Edward's teen years were full of pain and confusion, including running with a gang and becoming a father at the age of sixteen. He dropped out of high school and began to sell drugs, but when so many of his old school mates were killed or locked up, Edward decided to make a change and got a job at a sandwich shop. While working there, he learned a great truth: he couldn't read or write. Mad at the world generally and white people specifically, he turned to Islam. But as he taught himself to read and write, he started to see life in Black America differently. He stopped feeling sorry for himself and walked away from Islam. This journey has taken him from liberalism to being a God-fearing, strong-minded, thought-provoking, in-your-face Christian Conservative with an attitude.

Saturday, June 20, 2015
Freedom Center
423 W-W Industries Park
Washington, MO 63090
9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Sponsored by: Concerned Women for America of Missouri
Greater St. Louis Area
stl.director@missouri.cwfa.org | 314-795-2971 | mo.cwfa.org

Off the Plantation
to Freedom

Edward Cage has been an eloquent and powerful advocate for conservatism, recognizing that the false story line told by the left and propagandized by the media only serves to keep America's minorities "on the plantation." Cage will share his tactics for opening the eyes of those who are still enchained by the leftist lies, and for bringing them to see the light of truth.

Edward Cage was born in St. Louis, Missouri. Raised on the city's North side, he was faced with countless challenges, each of which he overcame. Edward's teen years were full of pain and confusion, including running with a gang and becoming a father at the age of sixteen. He dropped out of high school and began to sell drugs, but when so many of his old school mates were killed or locked up, Edward decided to make a change and got a job at a sandwich shop. While working there, he learned a great truth: he couldn't read or write. Mad at the world generally and white people specifically, he turned to Islam. But as he taught himself to read and write, he started to see life in Black America differently. He stopped feeling sorry for himself and walked away from Islam. This journey has taken him from liberalism to being a God-fearing, strong-minded, thought-provoking, in-your-face Christian Conservative with an attitude.

Saturday, June 20, 2015
Freedom Center
423 W-W Industries Park
Washington, MO 63090
9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Sponsored by: Concerned Women for America of Missouri
Greater St. Louis Area
stl.director@missouri.cwfa.org | 314-795-2971 | mo.cwfa.org