Jon Bierman's presentation will include the various problems with the Iran deal itself, the administration's likely motivation in entering into the deal, and the deal's probable short and middle term effects on Israel, the Middle East, and the U.S. if it is implemented.

Bierman has traveled to the region repeatedly throughout the last four decades. He has witnessed the region's evolution into the world's roughest neighborhood.

He has practiced law as a commercial litigator in St. Louis for the last 15 years first at the law firm of Gallop, Johnson & Neuman and then with Polsinelli, P.C.

Bierman's degree in history from Washington University focused on the history of the Middle East.
